

FOWL Hosts Its First MEMBERS-ONLY Event

In honor and appreciation of its devoted members, the Friends of the Waccamaw Library (FOWL) is hosting a much-anticipated, members-only event in the DeBordieu Auditorium at the Waccamaw Branch Library. Well-known Pawleys Island resident and cultural historian Lee Brockington will present an engaging and informative program that will educate newcomers and locals alike on the fascinating history of the Lowcountry in which we live.

Date: January 28, 2016 • Time: 4:00 pm

Location: DeBordieu Auditorium, Waccamaw Branch Library

Light Refreshments will be served.

Memberships will be available to non-members to join at the door.

"Loving the Lowcountry" is a lecture based on being a newcomer to Pawleys Island, as Lee Brockington was in 1984. Despite being a native of Columbia, South Carolina, Lee had only vacationed at Pawleys during the summer and enjoyed only an occasional off-season visit.

Moving to the area is an entirely different experience. So much of Georgetown's 20th century history has been word-of-mouth, small publications and museum membership lectures. Lee began to ask questions and has never stopped in her quest to find out as much as possible about how life is different along the coast of SC.

In learning of the local history, Lee has been anxious to share it with other newcomers eager to learn of the history and ecology, the great men and women, of rice and slaves, but also of small stores, family traditions and great storms. Learn with Lee as she peruses the centuries and welcomes all those who love the Lowcountry.
